Share Calendars with Others

Google Calendar allows you to invite other Google users to share a calendar with you. If you are co-operating with a team of people, this tool is priceless. This way, all members of a team know when each member is working. You can also enter the location of a meeting so that everyone knows where to go.

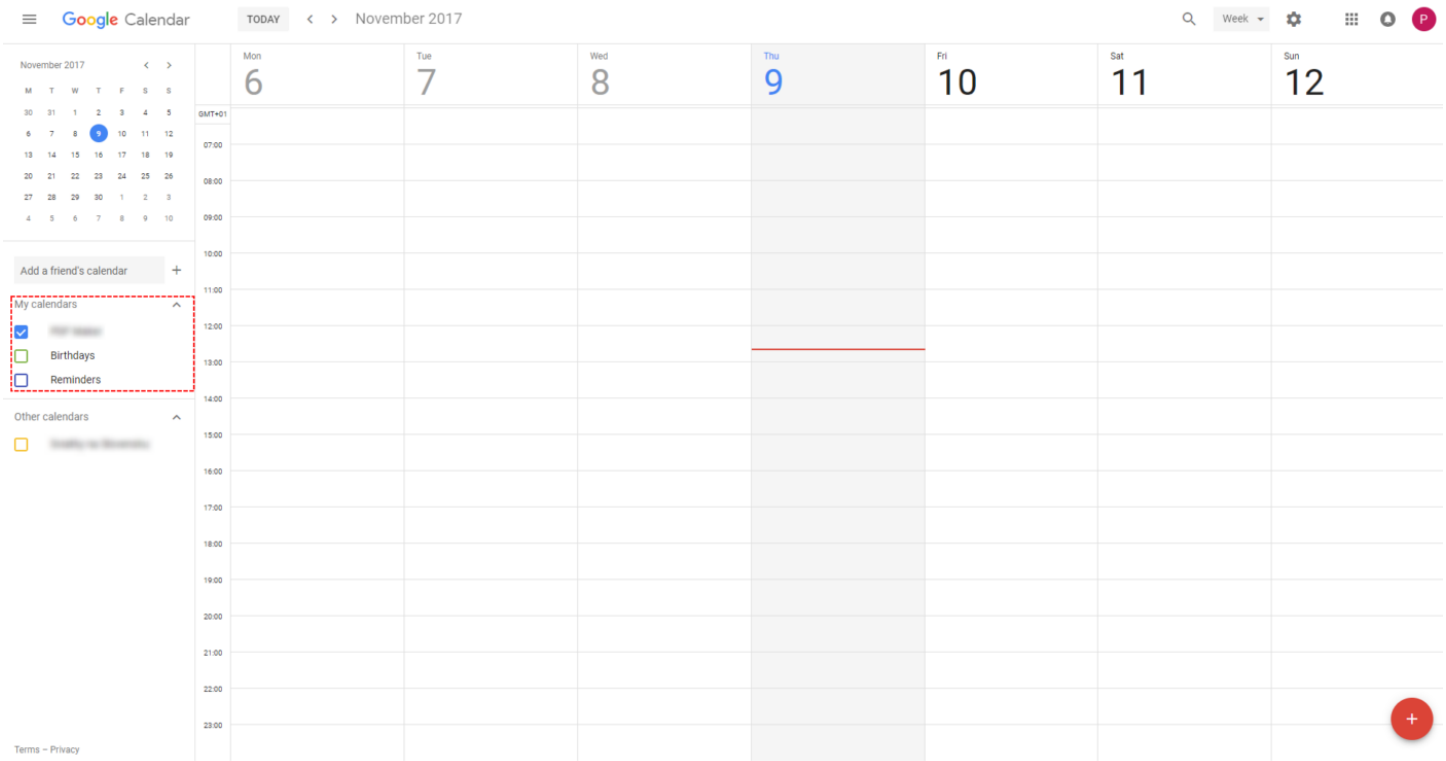

Google Calendar also allows you to set authorization levels on each calendar to control the amount of power you grant to other people. You can let them have full access to create and modify event details at that specific time or set it up so they can only see an event but not edit it.

Load Public Calendars

Google Calendar also has a comprehensive database of available calendars that you can support on your calendar. Google lets you subscribe to numerous pre-populated calendars for free, like your favorite team's game schedule or the sunrise and sunset times for your city.

Integrated with Gmail

In their attempt to take over the world, Google has integrated Gmail and Google Calendar to allow you to create events on your calendar right from an email. Google scans your emails and, if it finds a date and time, it gives you the title on the right side of the screen to add an event to your calendar. When you do this, the text from the email will automatically be copied into the information for the new event in Google Calendar.

Available Anywhere That There is Internet

Unlike an application you install on your computer, Google Calendar runs entirely in “the cloud,” meaning it is collected on a server you log in to. This means you can access your program from any device that has an internet connection.

Sync Calendars with Your Phone

Another beautiful property is the ability to sync Google Calendar with smartphones. This lets you easily schedule meetings and upcoming events from virtually anywhere, even you don’t have a computer with you.

When we consider its wide availability and benefits, we understand why it would be advantageous to integrate the Appointment Booking System with Google Calendar.

When you receive or approve new appointment requests, all of this is instantly saved on your Google Calendar. Our Google Calendar integration works with two-way sync. In addition to your appointments in BOOK-G appearing in Google Calendar, appointments you add for any timeslot with Google Calendar will also appear as busy in BOOK-G. Thus, even if you do not use SMS and Email

Notifications, you can easily watch all your appointments and receive reminders from your smartphone.

Also, this integration works perfectly for your clients.

Once your clients have completed their appointments, they can add their appointments to Google Calendars with the Add to Google Calendar option. Thus, they can easily watch their appointments on their mobile phones.

With the help of Google Calendar integration of the BOOK-G Appointment Booking Software, you can easily follow the weekly, daily, monthly appointment schedule.
